A discount directly off the service station pump price is preferable if you are in a port city and there is promotional pricing at the pump. You can choose the service station with the best price and your discount comes off that.

A discount off the pump National Card Price is preferable if you are outside a port city, or are travelling to rural areas where the price of fuel is more expensive. Generally the BP National Card pump price reflects the standard port city price and your discount is off that price, the matter what price is displayed at the pump.
